XTREME OUTBACK IN SWITZERLAND

Xtreme Outback, Australian Clutch Services' 4WD range of clutch and flywheels, has experienced growing success in the European market over the past two years.

"The positive reactions from European customers to our 4WD range have been very stimulating for us," ACS Managing Director, Brenton Jordan, said.

"The 4WD culture in Europe is getting stronger and many 4WD enthusiasts are not only active members of this community, they are also savvy consumers who look for the best possible products to enhance the performance of their beloved vehicle."

One of these passionate 4WD drivers is Switzerland-based Nicolas Genoud, founder of Geko 4x4.

Mr Genoud founded the company in 2002. The business rapidly evolved from 4WD equipment distributor to custom vehicle preparation and is now gearing up for its next project – organising off-road tours in Africa, Russia, Iceland, Romania and all over the world in vehicles prepared by Geko4x4.

"As an Xtreme Outback distributor, I am always happy to recommend the products. We're not only selling the Xtreme Outback clutch kits and flywheels, we're also using them, and loving them!" Mr Genoud said.

Mr Genoud recently completed a full range of modifications on his Nissan Patrol Y61, including replacing the dual mass flywheel using the Xtreme Outback solid mass flywheel conversion kit. The Nissan Patrol is now ready to challenge any terrain.

DIESEL POWER MODULES AUSTRALIA SEEK NEW TRADE PARTNERS

Diesel Power Modules Australia, distributed by KPD Industries in Melbourne, are a German-engineered and manufactured performance enhancing plug in power up for common rail diesel and turbo petrol motors. The company has just enjoyed a boom year, having doubled its volume in sales in the 2013 calendar year compared to 2012.

This achievement is a testament to the great response Diesel Power Modules Australia received from AAAA members, who took on the company's products after they ran an editorial on the PX Ford Ranger module in a previous edition of Australian Aftermarket.

KPD Industries is currently looking for more trade partners in the auto electrical, trucking, agricultural, mechanical and automotive and off road parts markets.

The modules are easy to install (most in under 10 minutes) and provide real and tangible results for customers. They also offer trade partners excellent profit margins, and the products are supported by industry leading customer service from the staff at KPD Industries. The company's mission is to help partners grow their business through offering premium products, such as Diesel Power modules, with high profit margins and excellent product support and backup.

KPD is committed to offering up-to-date technology and will soon release a three-channel plug in module update for the PX Ford Ranger and Mazda BT-50 3.2L Turbo Diesel.
